WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCT. 22, 1862

Some communications are crowded out of our columns this morning by news which takes precedence of everything. If Moses and the Prophets were to speak from their sepulchres, to the people, the latter would turn away to read the last telegraphic news.

Pontoon Bridge.

The Pontson Bridge, the building of which was commenced some six days ago, across the river at this place, was completed yesterday, and the first wagon passed over yesterday morning. The istocrats of Richmond are bitterly opposbridge is located above the Railroad ed to all overtures of peace, while the Bridge, at the Middle Ferry Landing. It consists of three boats placed endwise with connecting beams, and is about 445 mation has excited great wrath in the feet long, and twenty-five feet wide. Troops for Nashville.

A gentleman who left Louisville last Potomac Saturday arrived here yesterday evening. He states that he passed three regiments of infantry, cavalry, and artillery some fifty miles this side of Louvisville, on their way to Nashville. They will probably arrive here by Friday or Saturday. Other forces will soon be on their way, destined for a grand campaign through Middle Tennesse, and the rescue of East Tennessee, we devoutly trust, from the hand of the oppressor.
